ABSTRACT

Student mobility in Connecticut has been great, and the number of students moving from one institution to another in 1975 was well over 7,000. The guidebook for students and their counselors is intended to enable a student to develop a plan of study that may include courses at more than one institution. Included are policy profiles for two- and four-year colleges, both public and private, including state technical colleges, regional community colleges, and the Board for State Academic Awards. FOREWORD by
Louis Rabineau, Chancellor for Higher Education

Student mobility in Connecticut has been vast--the number of students moving from one institution to another in 1975 was well over 7,000. The Connecticut State Transfer Articulation Committee (ConnSTAC) predicts that student mobility will continue to increase. Student clientele has also expanded to include, in large numbers, mature adults, in addition to traditional college-age youth.

The Commission for Higher Education published the first guidebook on College Transfer in Connecticut in 1971. This guidebook for students and their counselors enables a student to develop a plan of study that may and often will include courses at more than one institution. Past editions of the transfer guidebook have focused on information from four-year colleges about policies affecting transfers from two-year institutions. Since student mobility has expanded, e.g., four-year college to four-year college, and from four-year to two-year college, and since the Commission for Higher Education is now the federally mandated "1203" Commission responsible for planning for all of postsecondary education in the state, this updated edition will include profile sheets from two-year private and public colleges, including state technical colleges, regional community colleges, and the Board for State Academic Awards.

The cooperation of college administrators throughout the state in the annual provision of the data in the guidebook is greatly appreciated. It is this kind of cooperation which facilitates bridging the gap between two-year and four-year institutions to the benefit of students, the institutions, and the public at large.

The following transfer statements are summations of actual Boards' policies pertaining to transfer.

Transfer to: Regional Community Colleges

From: Other Institutions of Higher Education

At all Regional Community Colleges, degree credit shall be granted for credit courses completed, for which no degree has been awarded, at all institutions within the Connecticut State System of Higher Education and at all other accredited collegiate institutions in accordance with the following:

1. Degree credit shall be granted for all credit courses which are applicable to the objectives of, or equivalent to the course requirements of, the curriculum in which the transferring student enrolls. Credit work which in not applicable or equivalent to curriculum requirements shall be accepted for credit at the discretion of the college. Degree credit shall also be granted on the basis of performance on examinations in accordance with standards and limits approved by the Board of Trustees.

2. Degree credit shall be granted for credit courses completed with a passing grade of "C" or better. Such credit courses shall be accepted only for credit, and letter grades assigned by other institutions shall not be recorded nor included in computations of student grade point averages.

NOTE: For students who wish to request the transfer of "Ds" and receive credit for courses taken with a grade of "D", the following applies:

3. At the option of a transfer student, degree credit shall be granted for credit courses completed at other institutions with a grade of "D", subject to the following conditions:

   a. If the student's grade point average at the time of transfer is at least 2.0, the student shall be considered in good academic standing, and letter grades assigned by other institutions to courses for which credit is granted by the Community College shall not be recorded nor included in computations of the student's grade point average at the Community College.

   b. If the student's grade point average at the time of transfer is less than 2.0, then the letter grade of "D" assigned by another institution to each course for which credit is granted by the Community College shall be recorded on the student's transcript and is included in computations of the student's grade point average and his academic standing at the Community College shall be determined accordingly.

4. Notwithstanding the number of degree credits which shall be granted in accordance with the foregoing, twelve of the total semester hours of credit applicable to an associate degree must be earned at the Regional Community College through which the degree will be conferred.

Transfer to: State Colleges

From: Board for State Academic Awards, Regional Community Colleges, State Technical Colleges

The State Colleges accept the obligation to provide the opportunity for graduates of transfer programs in the Board for State Academic Awards, Regional Community Colleges, and State Technical Colleges to continue their education to the baccalaureate level.

It is the policy of this Board that graduates from transfer programs of the two-year Associate Degree programs be admitted to the State Colleges provided they are recommended for such admission by the degree granting institution and provided they make application for admission by a common date specified by the Board of Trustees for State Colleges and in the manner prescribed by the Board.

Such students shall be admitted to the third year of study on the same basis as sophomore students are admitted to junior standing on the campuses to which the transfer graduate is admitted.

Such students shall be required to complete not less than the equivalent of two academic years of additional study at the State College. The guarantee of admission sh ll be to the State College system and not necessarily to a specific campus.

Transfer to: University of Connecticut

From: Regional Community Colleges

The University of Connecticut admissions office extends priority in transfer admission to qualified students at any of the Regional Community Colleges of Connecticut.

You are qualified to take advantage of the opportunity to earn your bachelor's degree at The University of Connecticut if:

1. You complete a two-year transfer program that prepares you to do upper division work at the University.

2. Your grade point average is satisfactory and you have the recommendation of an academic counselor of the community college.

3. You observe application fees and procedures as set forth by the Admissions Office--explained in a guide sheet accompanying the official application form.

A RESOURCE FOR EDUCATIONAL PLANNING

The usual patterns of going to college have changed. Years ago it was unusual for students to move from one college to another. Most students who entered a college remained there until they completed their studies. Few entered as sophomores or juniors after a beginning elsewhere. Transfer students remained few in number because they received little encouragement.

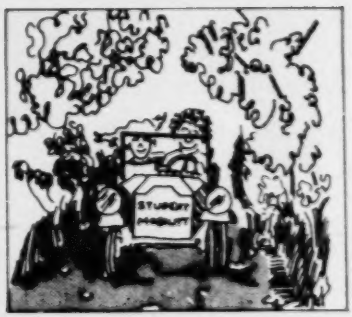
The climate for college transfer has changed. According to research conducted by the Connecticut State Transfer Articulation Committee (ConnSTAC), the number of students moving from one institution to another in 1975 was well over 7,000. ConnSTAC predicts that student mobility will continue to increase.

This guidebook is written primarily to inform students that educational planning, which may necessitate attending several Connecticut colleges, is possible. Student mobility among Connecticut colleges is accepted and facilitated by systemwide policies and practices.

The information presented in this guidebook is intended to make transfer between colleges a smoother process. It provides the opportunity to compare and to select a college which will facilitate the student's educational plans. Connecticut institutions included in this publication welcome transfer students and work to encourage their success.

The guidebook should be useful to in-state students as well as Connecticut residents attending college out of state who are seeking an educational opportunity closer to home. If you are a student for whom college transfer is a possibility at some future time, you owe it to yourself to find out what Connecticut transfer is all about.

Connecticut colleges recognize the need for students to transfer from one institution to another. It is in the best interest of all concerned to make transfer as easy as possible. To provide assistance to all transfers, colleges have designated a specific professional person on campus. If you have questions or problems your first resource is the liaison person. Name and/or title, and telephone number of the transfer liaison person appears on the college profile sheets in this guidebook.



HIGHER EDUCATION IN CONNECTICUT

There are many opportunities for postsecondary education in Connecticut. Students have a wide selection from which to choose: there are colleges and universities, vocational and proprietary schools, continuing education programs, on-the-job training, and degrees by examination. This publication includes the 43 postsecondary accredited institutions in the state which offer degree programs. State residents are fortunate in the quality and availability of these institutions. In planning for higher education each student should understand the major distinctions between these accredited institutions.

1. The two-year community, junior, and technical colleges offer the associate degree based on two years of college study. Some of these also offer various one-year certificate programs. Certain courses of study are designed specifically to lead to further education at a four-year institution while others are intended for immediate employment. Students are cautioned to select the proper two-year programs within the college if they intend to transfer. Counselors at all colleges are prepared to assist students with transfer planning.

2. The four-year colleges and universities offer the bachelor's degree based on four years of college study. Some also offer two-year associate degree programs, and graduate studies beyond the bachelor's. Four-year colleges and universities are often called "senior" institutions to distinguish them from two-year colleges.

3. The University of Connecticut is comprised of a Main Campus located in Storrs and five University Branch Campuses located in Groton,

Hartford, Stamford, Torrington, and Waterbury, The Branch Campuses are "feeder" campuses. That is, they offer the first two years of the University program exclusively for continuation on the Main Campus at Storrs. The Branches offer no degree. A student admitted to a Branch is a student of the University. Successful completion of the Branch program ensures continuation at Storrs. Students moving from a Branch to Storrs are not considered transfers. The University labels them "Branchfers."

4. The Board for State Academic Awards (BSAA), functioning as a college without classes, has as its faculty consulting examiners drawn from colleges and universities in the state. The BSAA is an examining and credit validating agency. Credit towards a degree is granted on the basis of proficiency examinations, and evaluation of course credits earned at postsecondary education institutions. Candidates proceed at their own pace and a degree is awarded when requirements are complete. For further information contact the Board for State Academic Awards, 340 Capitol Avenue, Hartford, Connecticut 06115.

REQUIREMENTS FOR SUCCESSFUL TRANSFER

The basic requirements for successful transfer include the following:

1. Reasonable evidence of academic ability. This usually means a combination of the following:

   a. A record of at least 15 semester hours of college-level courses completed with grades of "C" or better.

   b. A recommendation from college counselor, or faculty member.

   c. Reasonable success on standardized tests such as

      SAT - Scholastic Aptitude Test
      ACT - American College Test

Not all of the above carry the same importance at all colleges. The data sheets in this booklet will indicate the relative importance at each college in Connecticut.

2. Meeting application deadlines for semester of transfer. Admissions and financial aid offices must set deadlines to be equitable to all students seeking transfer.

3. Supplying all necessary credentials to the admissions office.

   a. application and fee

   b. high school and all college transcripts

   c. equivalency diploma (if applicable)

   d. health forms (where applicable)

   e. list of current courses in progress

   f. final official transcript of grades when all courses are completed

4. Meeting transfer admissions requirements such as grade point average, total semester hour credits, and program prerequisite requirements, as printed in the catalog of the receiving colleges.

HOW TO USE THE COLLEGE DATA SECTION

The pages which follow contain information gathered from the colleges in Connecticut. The information is pertinent to students planning transfer. Students are urged to refer to the college's catalog for additional information.

Following is a brief explanation of each section of the data sheet.

I. Transfer Admissions lists common criteria on which transfer admissions decisions are made. Open door admissions (on the data sheets for associate degree programs) indicates that the college accepts students on a "first come" basis for most programs.

Priority for admissions (Item B on bachelor degree profiles) means that a student meeting all requirements for junior year status and, in most cases, possessing the associate degree, will be given admissions preference.

Financial aid is generally available to students who qualify. In some colleges financial aid is designated especially for the transfer. Specific information must be sought from the financial aid office of the college.

The liaison person listed has been designated especially to assist transfers. This person is your first contact.

Transfer credit evaluation is an important aspect in determining which college to select. It is important to know how much credit will be accepted towards your degree, and how much additional credit will be required to complete degree requirements.

II. Application procedure for transfers usually differs slightly from that of freshmen. When applying for admissions be certain to request any necessary forms or information pertinent to transfer students.

If the second box in Section II is checked you may have your college mail your application along with your transcript. Then, correspond with your high school to send your record directly to the admissions office where you are applying.

SAT tests, if required, should be taken prior to applying for admissions. If taken in high school, they need not be repeated unless the student seeks a higher score.

Deadline dates are important. Do not jeopardize your acceptance by applying late.

III. Transfer requirements will give you an idea of how likely you are to meet credit and grade requirements for successful transfer. Bachelor degree programs may vary in number of credits accepted from two-year and four-year programs.

Recommended grade point average is intended to give an idea of the likelihood of continued success at a minimum level.

The acceptance of "D" graded courses is a condition which must be clarified individually. Colleges not checking that item will not accept "D" graded courses under any circumstances.

IV. Nontraditional college credits encompasses a variety of educational experiences. This section of the data sheet is primarily to give an indication of the more common types of nontraditional credits which the college will consider for transferrability. There are other forms of nontraditional credit not listed which students are urged to clarify with the college. It is important for students with these other types of nontraditional credit already earned, such as proprietary school courses and military experiences, to know whether or not a college will apply that credit towards the degree.

V. Programs listed as requiring early transfer or special guidance are intended to alert students interested in these programs to seek counseling assistance prior to application.

All transfer requires planning to assure maximum credit. Seek academic advising early in your college education.
